

Due to the chemical risk, three products are being withdrawn from the Serbian market

The Ministry of Trade, Tourism and Telecommunications announced that three products are being withdrawn from the markets due to chemical risk.

According to the website of the alert system for unsafe products of this ministry, they contain more lead and cadmium than allowed.

Due to the danger that they could endanger the health and safety of consumers, dishes, cups and plates from the manufacturer "Zara Home" are being withdrawn from the market.

"Laboratory testing of the product determined that the product contains a higher percentage of lead and cadmium than the allowed limit, which can endanger the health and safety of consumers and other users of the product," it is stated on the ministry's website, Biznis reports.
